

TECHNOLOGY IS A "GOOD" THING. RIGHT?

Technology has provided many improvements in communication and entertainment. We are able to quickly keep up with friends, search the boundless limits of the Internet, and the gaming industry is booming with hi-definition realistic play. However, along with these improvements comes an unwelcome predator, addiction.

The good news is that technology addictions are treatable. Lost and Found will provide you with ideas and principles that are specific to issues related to the overuse and abuse of technology. The comprehensive approach provided in this book will help parents, caregivers, and professionals feel more confident and effective through a better education of the factors and warning signs leading to technology addiction. It also offers practical exercises and resources to help those suffering its effects.

National Center for Youth Issues

Practical Guidance Resources
Educators Can Trust

P.O. Box 22185 • Chattanooga, TN 37422-2185
423.899.5714 • 866.318.6294
fax: 423.899.4547 • www.ncyi.org

Kim "Tip" Frank is a longtime educator and therapist, has had the privilege of helping thousands of kids, formerly as a teacher, and more recently, as a counselor/therapist. He has authored and coauthored numerous books on topics including ADD/ADHD, anxiety disorders, depression, social skills, grief, divorce and separation, and he presents nationally on these topics. Most importantly, Tip is a devoted husband and a father of two teenagers.

Mike Paget currently works as a state consultant for students with severe emotional and behavioral problems. He has worked with ODD, CD and other special needs students for more than 25 years. Mike is an innovator of effective approaches for working with extremely challenging students. He has conducted seminars across the U.S. and Canada for educators on creative techniques for managing classroom behavior, student aggression and crisis intervention.

