Coleman is a graduate of Northwestern University and DePaul University. He has served as a school counselor at Jones College Prep since 2014.

Coleman, a former actor, found his love for education and students while performing with About Face Theatre company and its youth talk-back program. He recognized that serving as a school counselor would afford him with daily opportunities to “support, validate and affirm the next generation of leaders and change agents.”

While at Jones College Prep, Coleman collaborated with the Student Government Association to spearhead a revised sexual health education program for 377 sophomore students. His holistic approach to school counseling at Jones College Prep includes advocating for expanded education and knowledge for students as well as school staff.

Coleman, who earned his Licensed Clinical Professional Counselor (LCPC) designation in 2017, collaborated with the school team to create extensive social/emotional programming at the freshman level as well as enhanced the school community’s awareness of social/emotional learning as an important facet of the high school experience.

ABOUT THE SESSION: Join Brian as he presents Embrace and Empower the Unicorns. As school counselors, we recognize strengths and gifts in our students that they may not see in themselves. When we are authentic in our own unique gifts, we can create a safe and accountable space for students to shine a light on their own. Brian will share how you can use counseling interventions to help students connect their passions and interests to their goals.

Participants will:

- Learn how to use personal strengths to build rapport with students
- Discuss (and roleplay) practical strategies to engage students
- Identify comprehensive school counseling program components that increase student outcomes.

1. Behavior Interventions that Work

Amie Dean

SPEAKER BIO: Amie Dean, M.Ed., B.A. has worked in education for 21 years. She has experience teaching at all levels, and has taught both special and general education. She was with Fulton County Schools (GA) for ten years, four of which she provided support to teachers and students as the Student Support/RTI Coordinator for her middle school. She holds a Masters degree in Education and is Nationally Board Certified as an Exceptional Needs Specialist. With 21 years experience as an educator and 10 years as a professional consultant, Amie has worked with thousands of teachers, counselors and administrators in over 250 districts to improve best practices in behavior support, student engagement, and differentiated instruction. Amie has trained with Dr. Rick DuFour, Dr. Kay Burke, Dr. Spencer Kagan, Dr. Ruby Payne, and many others.

ABOUT THIS SESSION: Join Amie as she presents, Behavior Interventions that Work. Counselors and Educators throughout the country are facing questions they never thought they would have to ask. “Why are students giving up so easily?” “Why can’t I get them to comply?” This session is designed to provide counselors, teachers, and administrators with research based strategies to employ immediately to create a positive school climate. These are practical, hands-on strategies to use with students who have suffered trauma, have behavior challenges, or just need positive interactions to motivate them to put forth increased effort AND develop self belief.

Pre-Conference Session (2:00 p.m. – 5:00 p.m.)

Cost: $50 Professional / Affiliate • $40 Graduate Student / Retiree / Emeritus

2. Embracing Evidence Based Practices in School Counseling: Incorporating the Use of Data

Mary Beth McCormac

SPEAKER BIO: Mary Beth McCormac, PhD, NCC has over 30 years experience as a school counselor. She was certified as Nationally Board Certified in School Counseling. She has published in the ASCA journal and magazine – her article “District-wide Initiative to Improve Tier 1 with Evidence-based Classroom Lessons” was published in 2019. She is a member of the Editorial Board for the Professional School Counseling Journal. As the chair of the KSCA Professional Development Committee she is excited to present this workshop to help counselors take their programs to the next level.

ABOUT THIS SESSION: Join Mary Beth as she presents, Embracing Evidence Based Practices in School Counseling: Incorporating the Use of Data. Today’s school counseling programs need to be data driven, not random acts of guidance. Counselors need to use data to show what school counseling interventions the school counseling program is implementing that can be directly tied to improved student achievement and behavior. Without accountability data school counseling programs will remain underfunded or reduced during hard budget years. Stakeholders care about data, learn how to collect data to inform your program and show its effectiveness.
